2007: ecdn's first year

The activities that were organised in ecdn's first year of existence made very clear how important the existence of such a network is. Five ecdn seminars and a conference provided an opportunity for in-depth exchange on the interdependence of social and financial exclusion, helped to compare the situation of different European countries and to develop strategies to more effectively fight over-indebtedness and financial exclusion.

Despite being explicitly at the agenda of the EU Social Inclusion strategy very few member states have implemented and/or further developed measures to fight over-indebtedness within their National Action Plans on Social Inclusion. The great majority of the plans hardly mentioned the issue. No wonder thus that debt advice and consumer organisations have not been strongly involved in the developments of the plans. This certainly will have to change and it will change with the upcoming new 'round' of Strategic Reports.

Based on the experiences of colleagues from across Europe the participants of the 2007 ecdn seminars have gained better insight into the EU Social Inclusion Agenda and its potential with regards to the fight against over-indebtedness and financial exclusion. Influencing policy goals and lobbying for the necessary measures to more effectively fight over-indebtedness and financial exclusion, such as the introduction of legal debt settlement processes and debt counselling services, safeguarding better access to adequate financial services and fostering financial well-being through education and training, was only one of the challenges that were discussed during seminars and meetings. Next to this, strategies to take better advantage of the existing processes related to the Open Method of Coordination and to ensure that over-indebtedness and financial exclusion will be included in the next round of reports were exchanged and developed.

Having successfully established ecdn as a fully fleshed network - and as an international association under Belgian law - has to be seen as an important step towards becoming an increasingly influential civil society actor in the field. Despite funding insecurities with regards to the near future, the established communication structures will help to foster continuous dialogue and exchange and to keep developing more efficient strategies and stronger ways of transnational cooperation.

The growing problem of over-indebtedness needs to be counteracted by increasing efforts to influence policies on national and European level in order to strengthen the financial and social well-being of all European citizens.

Next to the ecdn team at ASB Schuldnerberatungen, who tried their best to coordinate all activities, the organisers of the five ecdn seminars and partners in the EU-project on establishing the network deserve special thanks: The Guarantee Foundation, the NIBUD, SOS - Consumer Defence Association, the Society for Promotion of Financial Education (SKEF), SFZ Mainz, GP-Forschungsgruppe and l'Observatoire du Credit et de l'Endettement, whose representatives also formed ecdn's initial management committee. ecdn's events, however, attracted many more organisations. Some of them meanwhile joint the network as members, others are preparing their membership applications. Among the one's who are not - yet - members, but participated in ecdn activities were representatives of Schuldnerberatung Tirol from Austria, the Finish National Research Institute of Legal Policy, the German Arbeiter Wohlfahrt Bundesverband e.V., Caritas Germany, Präventionsnetzwerk Finanzkompetenz, Verbraucherzentrale Bundesverband, Diakonisches Werk in Hessen und Nassau e.V., the Irish MABS, the Latvian Consumer Rights protection center, the Warsaw School of Economics, SEFIN from Portugal, the University of Valencia and ADICAE from Spain, Citizens Advice, Debt on our Doorstep, KUC, Personal Finance Education Group/pfeg, and Fair Finance from the UK, EAPN Netherlands and the Dutch Ministry of Justice. Speakers at ecdn events included representatives from the Erste Bank Group, the Czech National Bank, the KBC Group (Post Bank), the Czech Ministries of Industry and of Finance, the Social Platform, the Worldbank and the European Commission/DG Employment and Social Affairs.

A big thank you to everyone who has contributed to developing the network

Kick-Off Meeting in Vienna

31 participants from 14 European countries attended the ecdn Kick-Off Meeting from 1–3 February in Vienna. Starting off the important new network by uniting the experiences, knowledge and power of experts from Austria, Belgium, Czech Republic, Finland, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Luxemburg, The Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Slovakia, Sweden and the United Kingdom, a solid base to further developments could be laid.

The introduction was followed by presentations on the content and context of the coming year's work programme. In the afternoon working groups were run in a 'World Café Style', giving each participant the chance to participate in several groups talking about objectives and activities, membership and working structures finances and infrastructure after 2007, and starting with the preparation of the seminars on social and financial exclusion.

ITALY: Caritas Diocese Bozen-Brixen Debt Counselling

Caritas Bozen-Brixen Debt Counselling is a non-governmental organisation with an all-embracing assistance approach. Debt counselling supplies professional assistance which intervenes when people have gotten into financial difficulties or are on the verge of getting there. The essential function of debtor counselling lies in the free-of-charge advice to heavily indebted men and women that are residents of South Tyrol, whereas the objective is to secure their living and to regulate their debts. The goal is that these persons take over the responsibility for their situation and manage it wisely. Assisted by Debt Counselling, they can deal constructively with their fears and use personal resources and strength. On the subject of financial matters they can decide and act independently.

ICELAND: Domestic Debt Advisory Service

The Domestic Debt Advisory Service was established as a pilot project of the Ministry of Social Affairs in 1996. Today the advisory service operations are based on an agreement between the Ministry of Social Affairs, Housing Finance Fund and a couple of other local authorities and associations. It provides consultancy, at no cost, to people with serious debt payment problems. The Service shall assist people in getting an overview of their situation and help them to make payment plans, choose remedies and act as liaison in agreements with creditors, if required. The Service shall also provide comprehensive consultancy and training on domestic debt management by publishing specific pamphlets and educational material.

GREECE: 'The Quality of Life' – EKPIZO

EKPIZO was established to protect consumer rights and improve the quality of life. Greece does not yet have national networks on over-indebtedness and financial exclusion. EKPIZO is the only organisation monitoring the issues of over-indebtedness. EKPIZO's policy areas/activities include legal, economic, financial, insurance, health, food, environment, safety and consumer education issues. It gives information/advice to the individual consumer and handles their complaints, represents consumers in several committees, takes legal actions on behalf of consumers and has significant experience in out-of-court dispute settlement. It also conducts studies and research.

Helsinki: Debt counselling as a way to increase social inclusion

The first ecdn seminar on social and financial exclusion took place from 26th to 28th of April 2007 in Helsinki/Finland.

At the start a short general introduction to the EU Social Inclusion process and the national reports on social inclusion and their potential for fighting over-indebtedness was given. The main inputs then came from the Finish hosts who were introducing the Finish debt advice system. The ten participants from Austria, Belgium, Latvia, the Netherlands, Poland and Portugal gave some information about the situation in their own countries and exchanged examples of good and bad practices. In the discussions the Finish social credit law was identified as a good practice example. It has helped to reduce the number of highly overindebted people and to prevent new problems through better financial guidance. The visit of a debt advice office in Espoo gave an interesting insight into working methods, structure and funding of a Finish debt advice service.

At the second day of the seminar the participants came up with recommendations and conclusions about the development of debt advice services in general but also with regard to ecdn activities in this area. A common definition of debt counselling was identified as a precondition for the discussion of European debt advice structures. Furthermore the interrelatedness of debt advice structures and services, legal processes and social banking was underlined. As always time for exchange and discussions was too short but the seminar certainly provided a good base for further discussions at ecdn conferences, seminars and in working groups.

NIACE – National Institute of Adult Continuing Education

NIACE is a research institute and a membership-based voluntary organisation. It aims to promote adult learning: by research, advocacy, programme and resource development and support for adult learning practitioners and organisations. NIACE has a particular focus on those who have not benefited as much as they might from their time in compulsory education, which, in many instances, leads to poor levels of literacy and numeracy. It has committed a great deal of resource and effort to Financial Education for adults, which we see as being an important element in the fight against financial and social exclusion.

Advice UK

AdviceUK is the largest support network for free, independent advice centres in the United Kingdom. It was formed in 1979 as the Federation of Independent Advice Centres (FIAC). The founders shared a conviction that people's rights have no meaning without the means to enforce them. They saw their own work – of providing free information and advice – as a vital contribution to helping individuals and communities in need to enforce their rights and improve their quality of life. AdviceUK holds the same conviction today, and whilst the social welfare landscape has radically altered in the past 25 years the commitment to the provision of free, independent advice has not changed. AdviceUK supports the work of its members by providing information, training and resources to assist them in their work. It represents the members' interests and those of the clients to government and lenders.

Mainz: A clear message on access to a bank account

The second ecdn seminar took place from 5th to 7th June 2007 in Mainz/ Germany.

After words of welcome by Prof. Dr. F. Hamburger and Prof. Dr. C.W. Hergenröder (both Johannes Gutenberg-Universität Mainz), an open discussion about the main questions and expectations made clear that most of the participants in the Mainz seminar hoped to hear and learn from the other countries and having good exchanges among themselves. Inputs on the European Inclusion Process, the National Action Plans and the fight against over-indebtedness, as well as an overview of the situation of access to a bank account in Germany and especially in Rhineland-Palatine that was given by the in-house lawyer and ombudsman of the saving bank of Rhineland-Palatine were preparing the ground for discussion. Participants inputs made it possible to get a more European picture and look more concretely at the situation and (best) practices in the participant's countries which included Germany, Luxemburg, Ireland and Poland, Spain, UK and Austria. In addition to this the situation in France and Italy was presented by students of the Pedagogical Institute of the University of Mainz.

Reflecting on the different experiences all over Europe the seminar ended with underlining some consequences and formulating key recommendations. The necessity to build a strong European network with reliable contact persons in all countries was stressed again, as well as the importance to enforce the link between practitioners and researchers and to increase the dialogue with banks. Both a clear vision and a clear message with regard to the guaranteed access to a bank account have to be promoted by ecdn and its members on European as well as national level.

Utrecht: Prevention is better than cure

The third ecdn seminar took place from 7th to 9th June 2007 in Utrecht/ The Netherlands.

Current developments, core principles and innovative ideas in the area of financial education were at the centre of this seminar that attracted experts from Belgium, Bulgaria, Germany, Greece, Spain and the UK. Various staff members of NIBUD with strong experiences in the areas of research and distribution of budget information and financial education gave lively insights into their work and presented their publications. A representative of the Dutch ministry of social affairs built the links between budget information and prevention work and national social policy strategies. Howard Gannaway, from the UK-based educational organisation NIACE suggested to take a closer look at the necessary frameworks to achieve sustainable financial well-being and proposed to develop more differentiated diagnostic tools as well as 'personal economics' as an academic discipline. The economic psychologist van Raaij introduced some of the systematic heuristics that can be found in the behaviour of the majority of consumers and suggested to not only use the results of behaviour economics for marketing purposes but also to plan information and education programmes for consumers.

Among the conclusions and recommendations drawn from the inputs and discussions of the seminar were the strong request for ongoing exchange and further seminars, as well as the development of definitions and curricula and the production of a European dictionary of relevant terms of concepts in several languages. Policies, both at national and European levels, should be sought to be stronger influenced with regards to giving stronger emphasis to financial education; existing instruments such as the NAPsinc should be used better to highlight issues of financial exclusion and the prevention of it. A continuous working group dealing with financial education should be established as part of ecdn.

Prague: Credit market does not give enough security

The fourth ecdn seminar took place from 21st to 23rd of June 2007 in Prague/ Czech Republic.

Representatives of the Czech Ministry of Finance, the Ministry of Industry, the National Bank and the ombudsman of the ERSTE Bank Group presented the Czech credit market from diverse perspectives. After additional inputs of the participants from the Netherlands, Germany and Slovakia an intense exchange about opportunities and risks of the credit market for over-indebted and/or financially excluded people took place.

One important result of the discussion was that better consumer protection is needed in the form of legislation/regulation because the credit market does not give enough security for people who are less financially literate. The problem of so called nonbank money lenders which are little controlled and give money to over-indebted people with bad creditworthiness is regarded as a European one. Furthermore it was stressed that research about the number of over-indebted households and about the situation of people who do not have access to loans and credits are among others essential data to analyse the social situation throughout Europe. An interesting project planned by the ERSTE Bank Group as contribution to its corporate social responsibility was presented. It is about the establishment of a kind of debt service centre for people who are in debt, funded by the ERSTE Bank Group and in cooperation with consumer organisations. Getting advice will be free of charge and accessible for all people with financial problems.

Gdansk: Legal debt settlement processes

Experiences with existing private bankruptcy proceedings and with struggling for the introduction of such processes were exchanged at the fifth ecdn seminar that took place in Gdansk from 28th to 30th of June.

Next to discussing current problems and developments the participants started to develop a 'European debt settlement matrix' in order to provide a comparative overview of existing systems.

Based on the conviction that there might be no existing single system that can be transferred from one country to another, key elements of all processes were identified and clustered according to commonalities and differences, e.g. with regards to duration and conditions of the processes.

Participants agreed to invest further work into developing the matrix more fully in the future and committed themselves to continue lobbying for the introduction or the improvement of legal debt settlement processes in their countries.

L'Observatoire du Crédit et de l'Endettement asbl (OCE)

OCE is a research institute, known as the regional coordinating body in the sector of over-indebtedness, but also as a training centre for the 220 debt counsellors in Wallonia. It publishes the Belgian annual report, the Walloon annual report, a debt counselling guidebook, a juridical yearbook, thematic articles, articles in specialised magazines and also organises an annual seminar. The annual publications and seminars of OCE are designed to push forward policy reforms. Mandated by the Walloon Government, those specific missions of analysing the evolution of indebtedness and continuously observing changes and trends are aimed to help political decision-makers.

OSIRIS – Credal Plus

Credal+ is a social credit organisation with the objectives to fight over-indebtedness through a responsible social and economic analysis of the situation of the credit customers, and to fight credit exclusion based on the low profitability of consumer credits oriented to modest/poor households. Credal+ was created to experiment with small credits for modest households. Is it possible to propose to them a financial product with good conditions? How good is reimbursement going to be? Can we improve the credit score for this public? As the project in Wallonia has been a success, it is now extending to Brussels, and contact is made to reach Flanders.

Réseau Financement Alternatif A.S.B.L.

RFA is a network of 70 Belgian non-profit organisations which are active in North-South relationships, education, social economy, social inclusion and human rights. It aims to develop and promote ethics and solidarity in the relationships with money in order to contribute to a more fair and human society. RFA carries out studies, informs, attempts to raise public awareness and to initiate reflection, implements debates and develops new tracks for the topic of ethical and community finance and financial exclusion. RFA also promotes the development of new financial tools and mechanisms of an ethical and solidarity nature to encourage the various economic actors to invest in a responsible way.

Verbraucherschutzzentrale VSZ

VSZ is a non-profit association for consumer protection, mainly financed by public funds. The main objective is to make consumers consumption-aware and well informed within the framework of sustainability. VSZ provides objective, independent and critical information and advice to private persons; it aims to exercise consumers' rights and play a role in consumer representation.

The tasks are:

- to strive for, or intensify, cross-border cooperation in consumer affairs;
- to prevent and fight against over-indebtedness of private households;
- to give special attention to environment protection, health and social compatibility of products.

VSZ gives advice, acts as mediator and informs consumers on all consumer-relevant topics. This information will help the consumer to make the right decision on his own. It is independent from the suppliers' side and political parties, but not neutral - because consumer interests have absolute priority.
